The Management Board must, during the first three months of the financial year, compile the annual accounts and the situation report for the previous financial year, and present these to the Supervisory Board with a proposal of how to use the net retained profit. As soon as the audit report by the auditor of the annual accounts has been received, the Management Board must transmit same.
2. The Supervisory Board must examine the annual accounts and the proposal for using the net retained profit and must communicate the results of this examination in writing to the Shareholders' General Meeting. The Supervisory Board must submit its report to the Management Board within one month after it has received the documents. If, after examination, the Supervisory Board approves the annual accounts, these are thereby adopted.
3. If the Shareholders' General Meeting adopts the annual accounts, it may appropriate amounts up to half of annual net profits to other retained earnings.
4. If the Management Board and the Supervisory Board adopt the annual accounts, the amount of the annual net profit may be appropriated to other retained earnings, at their discretion, as long as these other retained earnings do not exceed half of the capital stock, or would exceed it after the profits have been so appropriated.

8. Where the capital stock is to be increased, the resolution for the capital increase may determine a distribution of profits that is different from Sect. 60 AktG.
9. Instead of a distribution of dividends in cash, the Shareholders' General Meeting may resolve to use the net retained profit by way of a non-cash distribution, provided such non-cash values to be distributed are traded on a market in the meaning of Sect. 3 (2) AktG.
10. The above paragraphs apply, if there are no mandatory rules to the contrary, mutatis mutandis also for the Group Consolidated Annual Accounts and a Group Management Report to be compiled by the company, if the preparation of such accounts and reports is prescribed by law for the company in its quality as parent company (Sect. 290 (1) and (2) HGB [German Commercial Code]).
